*You can't please everybody!
Her main complaints are a legitimate concern of the Cafeteria Committee and G.S. She does not address the need for more facilities due to the potential inflow from the new

SUBJECT : New Decor in Headquarters Cafeteria

1. Having surveyed the plans for the new decor in the Headquarters cafeteria, I understand how terrorist bomb throwers are created: their perceived needs are ignored. Users of the cafeteria do not feel the need for new decor (the best decor is the view out the windows) but they do perceive a great unmet need for service and space. The architectural model is accompanied by a nice memo from the DDA telling customers what will be done to them, but there is no means provided to enable them to talk back.

2. That is my lunch money GSI is spending on decor; I (and others) want it spent on food and service. If GSI has a large surplus of money, they should spend it on any of the following:

- a. a new kitchen helper to ensure that there would always be flatware and trays available during the lunch hour, that there would be rack space available for trays of dirty dishes;
- b. functioning water fountains with rubber bumpers to protect the glasses;
- c. clean water glasses (I recently watched a woman go through a whole rack, searching for one which did not feel grubby on the outside);
- d. reduced price of food (take 2¢ off the price of all salads, vegetables and desserts);
- e. slotted serving spoons for vegetables so one receives the vegetable minus the cooking liquid.

3. The new decor will not provide us with any more space, nor will it use the space any better. The "cattle runs" created by the fencing (descriptor thanks to male bystander) will do nothing which cannot be accomplished now. The carpeting will trap dirt (one person hoped that it was carpet tile so that when one square got too full of jello it could be replaced by a clean square). New chairs designed for sitting at a table and which do not occupy as much space as the current ones is a good idea. Returning to the customers that space which GSI recently stole for its cashiers would be nice.

4. We note that again the designers are trying to foist off on us plants as decor. They are a continuing cost which does nothing for either food or service. As one onlooker commented, "This whole redecorating thing is just an excuse so they can raise the prices."
